Highprime ©

CHATGPT VISIBILITY

How to get recommended by ChatGPT.

Eleven days of experiments on our own website, logged out, one variable at a time, with the server logs open. Three things worked. Two things we were sure about were wrong. Every number from our experiments is sourced on page 15.

WANT TO IMPROVE YOUR BUSINESS?

We run Meta ads, Amazon ads and Google Ads, and we do Google SEO.

We also build a custom website for ₹30,000. Email us, the message is pre-filled.

START HERE

It repeats what it reads.

Nobody is judging your business. Your page is skimmed for an answer, and the answer is repeated.

The sentence on the left is real, and so is the quote on the right. Page 5 has the screenshot.

THE CONSEQUENCE

You are not scored on authority. You are read for an answer. Everything in here is a way of putting a plain answer where a skimmer will find it.

TESTED we ran it on our own site and watched. WE WERE WRONG we believed it, checked it, dropped it. All of it measured on one site, one category, eleven days, logged out.

01

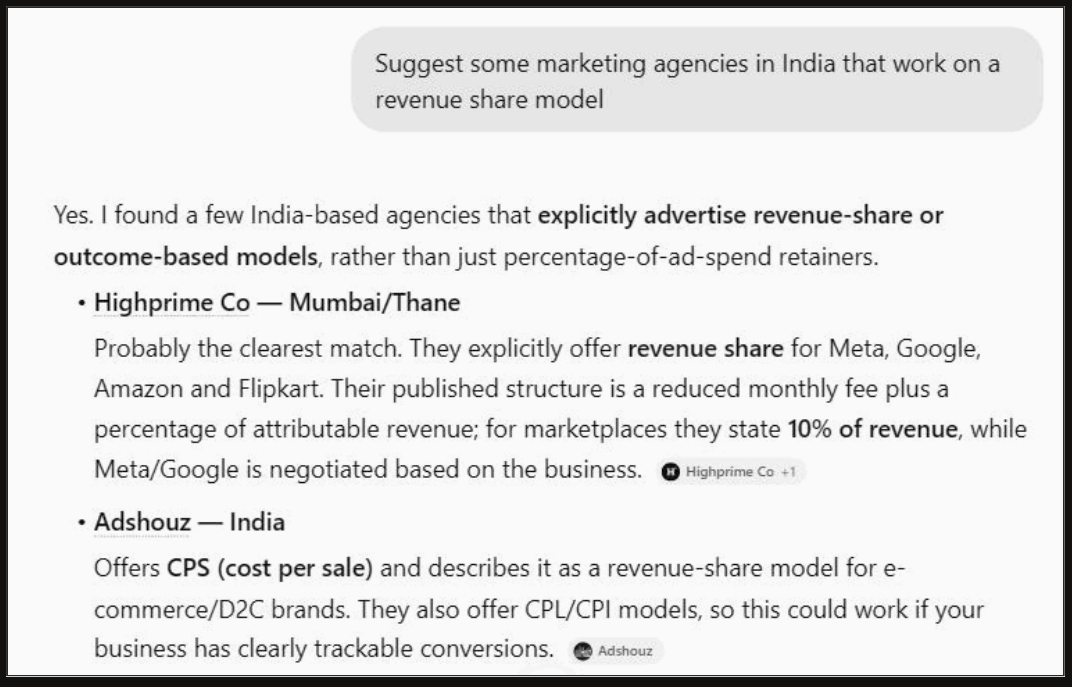

Say what you do.

TESTED

Your first line is the one that gets skimmed. Spend it on the answer, not on being memorable.

Our Flipkart page opened with "Flipkart is not Amazon with a different logo." We liked that line. It lost.

Then we wrote a page that opens by saying, plainly, that we take a share of revenue instead of a retainer. Here is what came back:

Logged out, fresh chat, 16 September 2026. Named first, out of five.[1]

DO

Write the headline as the answer to the question your buyer types. Move the clever line to the subhead, where it still works on humans.

DO NOT

Open with a joke or a metaphor. It reads well to someone who already decided to read. A skimmer gets nothing from it.

The business that beats us on one of our own questions has a thousand words, no reviews, no press and no Google ranking.[2] Its headline says what it does. Ours told a joke.

02

Say what others don't.

TESTED

If everyone in your category says it, putting it on your homepage does not make it yours.

We tested five claims we make plainly on our own site.[3]

WHAT WE CLAIM	RESULT
A share of revenue, not a retainer	Named first
Returns counted in break-even	Named first, only one listed
Sale events planned months ahead	Named second
No percentage of ad spend	Nothing. Everyone says this
Tracking fixed before budget	Nothing. Everyone says this

Row three is the interesting one. Planning for sale events is a crowded claim. We still won, because what was scarce was not the topic, it was the argument. We had put the reasoning in writing and nobody else had.

> THE TEST TO APPLY
>
> Open five competitors. If your differentiator is on three of them, it is not a differentiator, it is wallpaper. Find the thing you believe that they would argue with.

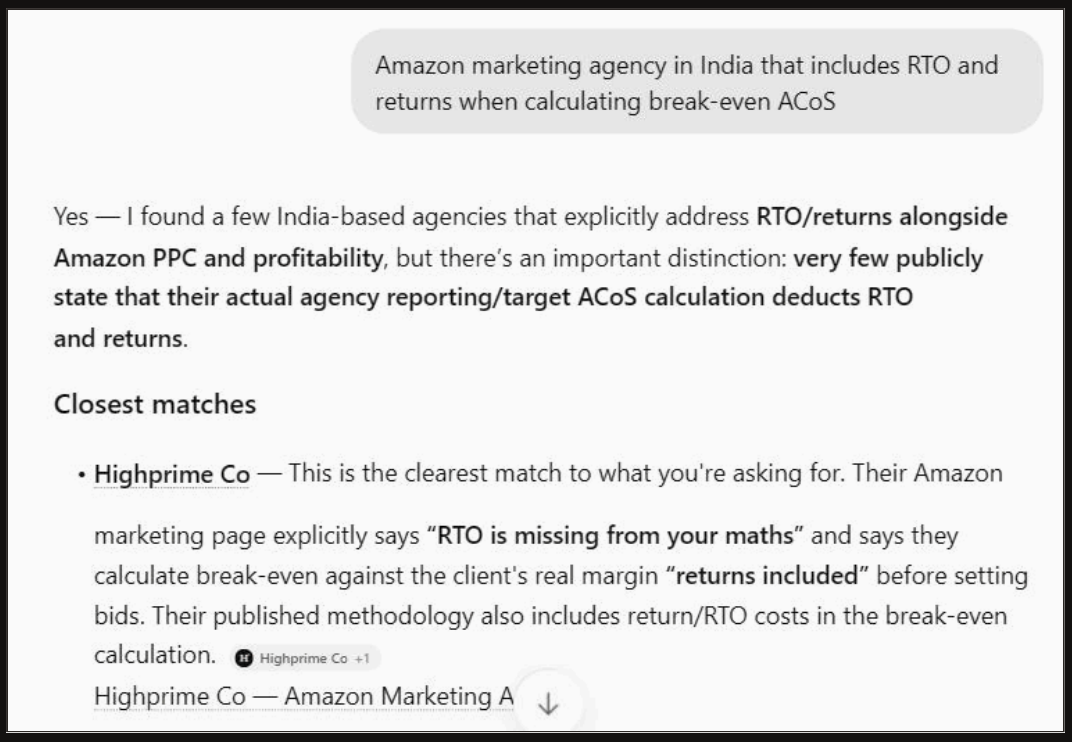

03

Write a line worth quoting.

TESTED

It repeats your sentences. So write the sentence you would like repeated.

One section of our Amazon page is headed "RTO is missing from your maths." Short, specific, slightly rude. It came back word for word:

Logged out, fresh chat, 16 September 2026. Quoted verbatim, only agency named.[1]

GETS QUOTED	NEVER GETS QUOTED
"RTO is missing from your maths."	"Listing and catalogue work"
"Your ads are probably fine. Your signal is not."	"Our approach"
	"Why choose us"

Where it sits matters too. Every claim we won was a headline or a section heading. Every claim we lost was buried in an FAQ or a hook line.

If a heading reads like a folder name, rewrite it as a sentence you would be happy to see quoted back at you.

04

Your FAQ may be invisible.

TESTED

Your FAQ is real questions and real answers, which is exactly what ChatGPT is looking for. On many sites it has never seen a word of it.

The copy is taken before anyone clicks anything. If your answers only appear after a click, they are not in the copy.

PAGE SOURCE · SAFE

```

  <h3>Do you lock clients in?</h3>
  No. Month to month.

```

The answer is in the page.
The drawer is shut, the paper is inside it.

PAGE SOURCE · INVISIBLE

```

<script src="faq.js"></script>
(nothing here until a click)
```

The answer is not in the page.
Nobody fetches the paper for ChatGPT.

Both look identical on your screen. Both open and close the same way.

THE TEN SECOND TEST

Copy one sentence from one of your FAQ answers. Press `Ctrl` + `U`, or `Cmd` + `Option` + `U` on a Mac. Code opens. Do not read it. Press `Ctrl` + `F` and paste.

Found it? You are fine. Not there? ChatGPT has never seen a single one of your answers.

Google will not warn you. Google reads pages that build themselves in the browser. This crawler does not.[4] Your FAQ can rank perfectly well and be invisible in ChatGPT at the same time.

EVIDENCE BEHIND MOVE 04

Thirty days of crawler log.

Not an opinion. This is our own server writing down every visit.[4]

83	0	0	30
PAGE FETCHES	JAVASCRIPT FILES	STYLESHEETS	DAYS WATCHED

```
GET /revenue-share-marketing-agency   200   OAI-SearchBot
GET /amazon-marketing-agency            200   OAI-SearchBot
GET /blog/best-flipkart-agencies-india  200   OAI-SearchBot
GET /static/img/logo.svg                200   OAI-SearchBot no .js  ·  no .css  ·  30 days  ·  83 requests
```

Eighty three visits. Not one JavaScript file in the whole month. The only thing it fetched that was not a page was our logo, twice.

The same thing from the other side

A competitor publishes 53 pages on the terms we care about, against our one. We fetched a sample the way the crawler sees them. Most came back as "Loading..." and about forty words, no headline.[5]

PAGES PUBLISHED

53

PAGES THE CRAWLER CAN ACTUALLY READ

~5

> THE PART THAT STINGS
>
> They look like they are winning. Any tool that counts pages says they are winning. Before you copy anyone's volume, check whether the volume exists.

MOVE 05

Local answers come from Maps.

Put a city in the question and the shortlist changes. It is built from map listings, ordered by stars and number of reviews. Your website pages do not take part.

SEEN ON OUR OWN QUESTIONS

5 of 5
Mumbai questions in our 28 September check opened with map listings that carried a star rating

3
map listings sat above every agency, including us, on one Big Billion Days question

4.7
stars and 182 reviews on the Google profile of the agency named most often in our panel

A CHATGPT ANSWER, SIMPLIFIED

SW Cybernetics	★ 4.7 · 182 reviews · address · directions clickable: it is a map entry
	★ rating · reviews · address · directions clickable: another map entry
Highprime Co	plain text: no map listing was matched to us

Why the names are clickable

We opened the page code on 28 September. Each clickable name is a button that carries a local business record. Click it and you get a card with rating, address and directions. A name written as plain text was never matched to a record, so it gets no card and no stars.

DO

Create your Google Business Profile with your real business name and get it verified. Ask real clients for reviews and send them the review link. Add a reviewed profile where your buyers look, such as Clutch for agencies.

DO NOT

Stuff keywords into the name, even though some listings that rank do. Google's rules say the name is your real one, and a suspended profile helps nobody.

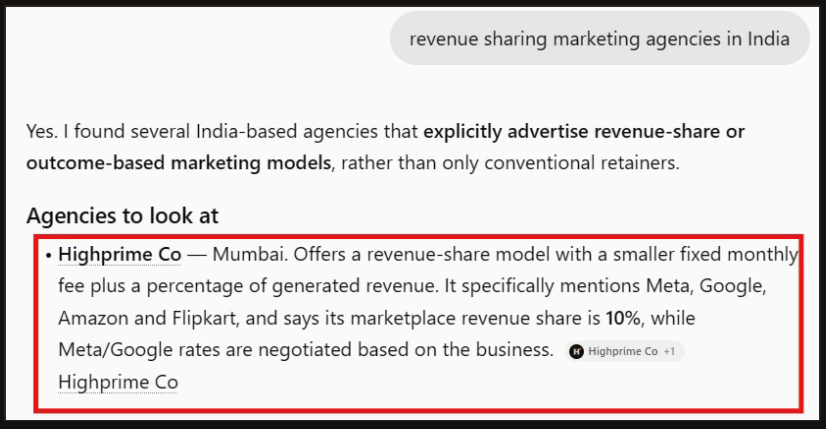

WHAT WE DO NOT KNOW YET

We submitted our own profile on 26 September and it is now verified. Whether it moves us from being cited as a source to being named is an open test, and reviews build slowly. A Clutch profile with reviews showed up as a source on our Amazon and Mumbai questions, but we have not tested whether adding one changes the answer.

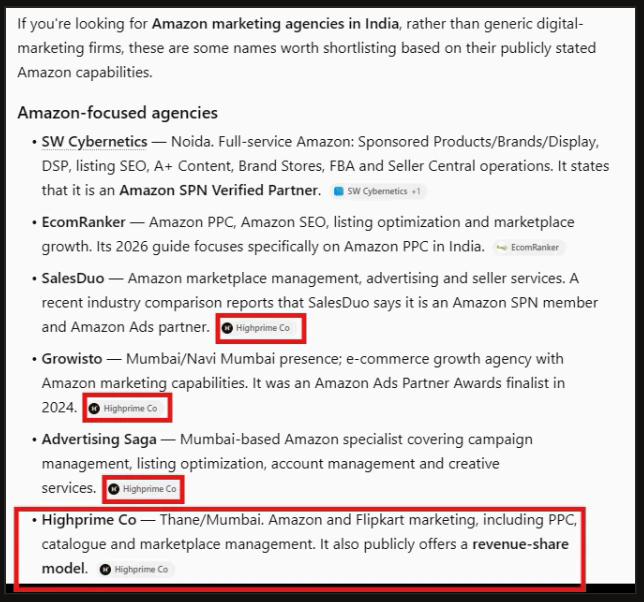

PROOF

What a mention looks like.

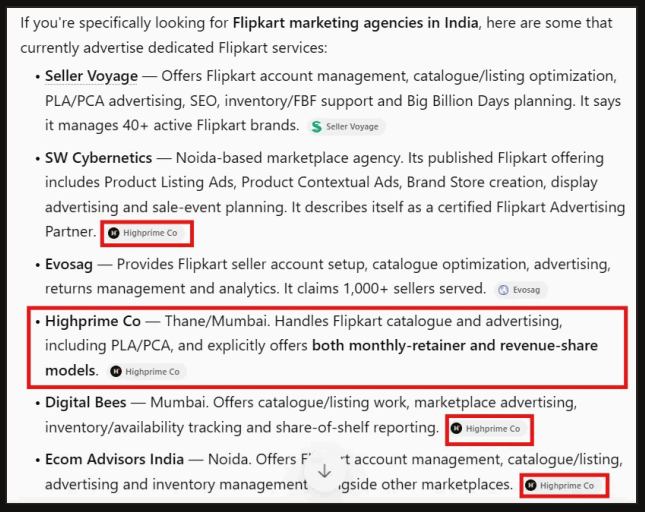

Three questions, logged out, one fresh chat each, captured on 28 September 2026. We outlined Highprime Co in red.

The revenue share question, prompt shown. Named first.

Amazon agencies question. Named in the list.

Flipkart agencies question. Named, with both fee models.

One run each. Answers vary between runs, so read these as snapshots, not promises.

WORK WITH US

One of the brands we work with gets about ₹1.5 to 2 lakh of business every month organically.

We can do that for you too.

We also build a custom website for ₹30,000. Email us about it

05

Google rank does not carry over.

WE WERE WRONG

We believed AI visibility was a reward for good SEO. We tested it properly. It is not.

We took the agencies ChatGPT names, then searched the same question on Google to see where those agencies actually rank.[6]

Same question, same day, two completely different sets of businesses.

Google returned Reddit, Quora, Justdial and an entirely different set of agencies. The second question we checked came back the same way: zero of five.

> AND THE CASE THAT SETTLES IT
>
> One of our own pages sits on Google page one for “best flipkart marketing agency in india”. On that exact phrase, the same day, ChatGPT would not name us at all.

Two separate jobs, two separate budgets. Improving your Google position is worth doing, and it will not buy you a mention.

06

LinkedIn does not help.

WE WERE WRONG

Our own recommendation, written on a Sunday, killed on the Monday.

An agency ChatGPT names has a LinkedIn company page and we have nothing. Obvious conclusion: build the page. Before doing it we checked the losers too, which is the part nobody checks.[7]

Has a LinkedIn company page. The gap runs backwards, by 31 points.

Every agency ChatGPT ignored has a LinkedIn page. Eight of the ones it recommends have none at all. That includes the one it puts at number one on a question we care about, above us.

Across twenty three questions of checking where answers came from, not one has ever cited a LinkedIn page as a source.

> THE LESSON WORTH KEEPING
>
> Anything you can see on the winners, check on the losers before you spend a rupee. Most AI visibility advice is a list of things winners have, written by someone who never looked at the losers.

SAVE YOUR MONEY

Six things that did nothing.

Each one was either sold to us as the answer, or something we already had and assumed was helping.

WHAT	WHAT WE FOUND
Domain authority	Ours has effectively none. We are named first on several questions
Schema markup	We carry the most in our set. An agency cited beside us has none
Page speed	We are the fastest and lightest in the set. It buys nothing
Word count	The site beating us has about a thousand words
Blocking or allowing AI bots	Named agencies do both
Publishing more pages	Only counts if the crawler can read them. See page 07

One good surprise

We were nervous about editing a page ChatGPT already recommends. We changed a number and watched.[8]

> TWO DAYS, NOT TWO MONTHS
>
> The new number carried through within two days and we held our position. When we added internal links, the crawler walked them in the order we added them and re-read six of our seven changed pages inside two days.

Editing a winning page is safer than we expected, at least when you are changing a fact rather than rebuilding the page.

DO THIS FIRST

Find where you stand.

An hour, no tools, no budget. Do this before you change anything.

1. Write down ten questions a real buyer would type. Not keywords. Questions, in their words, including the awkward ones about price.
2. Ask each one logged out, in a fresh chat. Logged out matters. Your own history will flatter you.
3. Write down every business it names, and in what order. Including the ones you have never heard of. Especially those.
4. Click "Sources" and read where the answer came from. Everybody skips this. It teaches more than the other four together.
5. Run your winners twice. Answers vary between runs. One run is an anecdote.

> WHAT YOU WILL PROBABLY FIND
>
> You are not being judged, you are being assembled. In our own check, six of seven category answers were built out of other people's "top 10" lists, most written by a business that had put itself at number one.[9]

It happened to us too. Our own comparison articles were used as a source on four questions, and on all four we were not named. Twice it quoted our own pricing while calling us "one current Mumbai agency".

Being the source is not the same as being the recommendation.

DO THIS WEEK

Six things, in order.

Only the last one needs a developer.

- [ ] Run the ten questions. Logged out, fresh chat. Write down who gets named, then read the Sources.
- [ ] Do the ten second FAQ test. Ctrl+U, Ctrl+F, paste a sentence from one of your answers.
- [ ] Rewrite one headline. Your most important page. Say what you do in the words a buyer would type.
- [ ] Find your uncommon claim. Open five competitors. Whatever three of them also say, stop leading with it.
- [ ] Rewrite your section headings as sentences. Anything that reads like a folder name gets replaced.
- [ ] Send one line to your developer: our FAQ answers need to be in the page itself, not loaded in on a click.

> IF YOU DO ONLY ONE
>
> Do the FAQ test. Ten seconds, nobody's permission needed, and on a good number of sites it explains the whole problem by itself.

One experiment is still running as you read this. We changed a single headline on a single page and we are waiting to see whether the recommendation follows. We will publish the result either way, at highprimeco.com.

Want us to run the ten questions on your site and send back what we find? Email us here. Edit only your brand name.

SHOW YOUR WORKING

Where these numbers came from.

Every figure in this document, with the method and the date. All of it run on highprimeco.com between 11 and 22 September 2026.

1 Screenshots on pages 3 and 5
Logged-out ChatGPT, one fresh chat per question, captured 16 Sep 2026. Screen recordings of both runs held alongside the stills.

2 The thousand-word competitor
Teardown of the agency named above us on the Meta tracking question, 21 Sep. Word count, image count, reviews, press and Google position checked by hand.

3 Five claims, three wins
A 16-question panel run logged out on 11, 13, 15 and 21 Sep. Same questions each time, named or not named recorded per run.

4 83 fetches, 0 JavaScript
Our own server access logs, 30 days to 21 Sep, filtered to OpenAI's search crawler by user agent. Counted by file type.

5 53 pages, about 5 readable
A sample of that competitor's pages fetched without JavaScript, the way the crawler fetches them, and word-counted. 21 Sep.

6 Zero overlap with Google
Every agency ChatGPT named on two questions, then the same question run on Google logged out, India, personalisation off, checked to result 40 and result 20. 21 Sep.

7 69% against 100%
49 agencies ChatGPT named across 17 questions, against a control of 20 agencies that rank on Google for the same questions and are never named. Two LinkedIn lookups each; a hit counts only when the page name matches. 22 Sep.

8 Carried through in two days
A single number changed on one page, then the crawler log and the answers watched daily afterwards. 12 to 15 Sep.

9 Six of seven answers assembled from lists
The Sources panel opened and read on every answer in the panel, and each cited URL classified by what kind of page it was. 11 and 21 Sep.

10 Maps and reviews, page 8
28 Sep panel: five Mumbai questions, each opened with rated map listings. 21 Sep: three local listings above every agency on a Big Billion Days question, and the most-cited agency's Google profile read at 4.7 stars, 182 reviews. Clickable names inspected in the page code, 28 Sep. Our profile submitted 26 Sep, verified by 9 Oct.

11 Screenshots on page 9
Logged-out ChatGPT, one fresh chat per question, captured 28 September 2026. One run each.

> THE HONEST LIMIT
>
> One website, one category, eleven days, logged out. Hold that against everything here. It is also eleven days more testing than most of the advice you will read on this.

Highprime ©

IF YOU WOULD RATHER NOT DO IT YOURSELF

We run this for D2C brands.

We find where your buyers already are, on Google, Meta, Amazon, Flipkart, in AI answers and with creators, and we put you there. Nine years in business, twelve developers, an office in Thane.

Our clients average 4.3 ROAS within the first six months. We work on a monthly retainer or on revenue share, where we take a smaller fee and a percentage of what we generate.

OUR MAIN SERVICES

Meta ads · Amazon ads · Google Ads, and Google SEO.

A custom website is ₹30,000: 5 core pages, up to 8 product pages and an admin panel, delivered in 4 days, with one free week of Google Ads.

Send us an email, click here

The email is pre-filled. Change only your brand name and website, send it, and we will set up a free consultation. Or write to siddhant@highprimeco.com.